Director’s Message

Hi Team,

Over the past few months, in conversations with peers and even some of our ex-colleagues now working elsewhere, one theme keeps coming up, AI in development. What once sounded like a far-off idea is already a reality in many companies.

Some teams are generating nearly 70% of their code with AI tools, and those who aren’t there yet are working towards that number because of the clear benefits: better code quality, faster delivery, and higher standards.

Director’s Message

At GlobalVox, we haven’t taken that leap yet. And that’s okay. Every team, every company, has its own pace of adopting change. But when we look around, it’s clear, AI is not a “maybe,” it’s a “when.” And when that moment arrives, the real question for us will be: are we ready to embrace it?

I understand there’s hesitation. New technology often comes with fear, fear of the unknown, fear of failure, fear of losing control under tight timelines. But here’s something important to remember: AI is not here to replace us. It’s here to support us. It can take over repetitive, time-consuming tasks so we can focus on what humans do best, problem-solving, creativity, and building meaningful solutions for clients.

Director’s Message

As Lao Tzu said, “The journey of a thousand miles begins with a single step.” For us, that first step is not a tool or a process. It’s simply curiosity. Being open to explore, to learn, to ask questions, and to imagine how AI could make our work easier and better. We don’t need to rush, but we do need to stay prepared. Because when the industry shifts (and it already is), the teams who are ready to adapt will not just keep up, they’ll lead the way.

Thank you for always showing the spirit of learning and growth. That’s what will carry us forward, AI or not.

Leo’s Roar by Leia

Hi team! Leia here. Just to remind everyone, I’m the tech guru in our pride. Leo is into management and Leon loves marketing. I’m the geek. So this month I’m going to talk about the festival of Vishwakarma Jayanti on 17 September.

My first festival!

I remember the first time I celebrated Vishwakarma Jayanti. Everyone was buzzing with excitement and I couldn’t help but join in, even though I was just a curious lion cub finding my place in the tech jungle. As you know, Vishwakarma, the divine architect and engineer, is celebrated as the creator of tools, machines, and even entire cities of the gods. For us in the modern world, it felt like a festival that bridges the ancient with the futuristic. Watching my human teammates decorate their office with bright marigolds and offer prayers before their laptops and servers reminded me how much respect they have for the tools of their trade.

Leo’s Roar by Leia

As an eager cub in this IT pride, I was fascinated by the rituals. My paws may not type as quickly as theirs, but I love tinkering with gadgets, troubleshooting code, and exploring how networks connect like invisible vines across the digital savanna. On this day, every device, from the smallest screwdriver in the maintenance room to the towering server racks, was honored as part of Vishwakarma’s blessing. It made me realize that every little tool, whether claw or keyboard, plays a role in building something greater.

The festival also gave me a chance to reflect on my own journey. Just like Vishwakarma symbolizes creativity and innovation, I see myself growing into a lioness who can craft ideas and solutions in the IT world. While my pride might roar in the wild, here I’ve found another kind of roar, the roar of systems running smoothly, code compiling without errors, and teamwork thriving. Vishwakarma Puja reminded me that technology, like nature, needs respect, care, and gratitude to truly flourish.

Well team, I trust you’ll pause and join me later this month to reflect on Vishwakarma’s many blessings. And remember, too, each one of us are necessary to make GlobalVox a success

That’s all for now. See you next month. In the meantime, remember Kunalsinh’s guidance, “Be Safe, Work Hard, Eat Well, Sleep Tight.” I will!

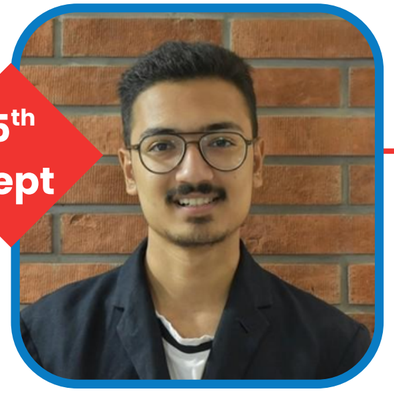

Bye for now … Leia

US Labor Day

1st Sept (Monday)

Observed on the first Monday of September, Labor Day is a national holiday in the United States dedicated to recognizing the achievements, contributions, and resilience of workers. It stands as a tribute to the strength of the labor force and its vital role in driving economic growth, social progress, and innovation.

Beyond being a day of rest and reflection, Labor Day also highlights the dignity of work and the importance of fair opportunities, safe working conditions, and respect for every individual's efforts. It is a reminder that behind every advancement lies the perseverance and commitment of people who shape industries and communities.

As we acknowledge this day, may it inspire us to continue valuing teamwork, integrity, and dedication, principles that strengthen both our workplaces and society as a whole.

Onam

5th Sept (Friday)

Onam is Kerala's most celebrated festival, marking the homecoming of the legendary King Mahabali and symbolizing prosperity, inclusiveness, and cultural pride. Spanning ten days, the festival is known for its vibrant traditions, floral rangolis (pookalam), traditional feasts (Onam Sadhya), folk dances, music, and the famous snake boat races.

Beyond its cultural richness, Onam represents unity, gratitude, and the spirit of harmony. It brings together families, communities, and people across backgrounds in celebration of shared heritage and hope for abundance in the year ahead.

As we acknowledge this festive season, may the values of Onam, joy, togetherness, and prosperity, inspire us to strengthen bonds and nurture positivity in both personal and professional spheres.

Vishwakarma Jayanti

17th Sept (Wednesday)

Vishwakarma Jayanti is dedicated to Lord Vishwakarma, regarded as the divine architect and craftsman in Hindu tradition. Celebrated with reverence across India, the day recognizes creativity, skill, and the spirit of innovation in fields ranging from engineering and architecture to craftsmanship and design.

Traditionally, workplaces, factories, and tools are worshipped on this day, symbolizing respect for the instruments and knowledge that enable progress. It is also seen as an occasion to express gratitude for the talent, precision, and dedication of individuals who build, create, and innovate.

As we acknowledge Vishwakarma Jayanti, may it remind us of the enduring value of creativity, discipline, and craftsmanship, qualities that continue to shape both tradition and modern industry.

Navratri

22nd Sept (Monday)

Navratri, one of India's most vibrant festivals, is celebrated over nine nights in honor of Goddess Durga and her nine divine forms. It is a time of devotion, dance, music, and cultural expression, symbolizing the triumph of good over evil and the power of inner strength.

The festival is observed with rituals, fasting, and traditional performances such as Garba and Dandiya, bringing communities together in joy and reverence. Each day carries its own significance, reflecting values of courage, compassion, and resilience.

Beyond its religious roots, Navratri reminds us of the importance of balance, perseverance, and positivity, principles that resonate deeply in both personal growth and professional journeys.

As we acknowledge this auspicious period, may the spirit of Navratri inspire new beginnings, collective harmony, and renewed energy in all aspects of life.
